2005 FIDE World Chess Championship Contenders

Here is the final list of participants in the 2005 World Chess Championship, to be held in San Luis, Argentina at the end of September. The eight selected players are the current 2004 title-holder Rustam Kasimdzhanov of Uzbekistan; the world's top active professional and 2000 -FIDE world champion Viswanathan Anand of India; the world's number two and three, Veselin Topalov (Bulgaria) and Peter Leko (Hungary); Michael Adams (England) - # 6, Peter Svidler (Russia) - # 9, Alexander Morozevich (Russia) - # 11, and – what a great achievement – Judit Polgar (Hungary), the world's strongest female player - # 7. (Vladimir Kramnik, Classical World Champion since 2000, was originally invited but declined to participate. However, under his interpretation of the Prague Unity Agreement, he has said he would consider this tournament as a candidates tournament to determine who should challenge him for the Championship. FIDE has not responded to this overture, but they seem to be bull-headedly plugging along on the same path they were on before the Prague Unity Agreement – there being a division between the Classical Champion, and the respective FIDE champion).

Topalov Wins M-Tel Masters

This is the strongest tournament so far this year, being a FIDE Category 20 ranking. It was held in Sofia , Bulgaria from May 11 to 22. It was a six – player double round robin. It had special significance since the players were banned from offering each other a draw (no Grandmaster draws). Here are the final standings :
